ABOUT THE ARTISTS

GABRIEL KAHANE

Gabriel Kahane is a musician and storyteller whose work increasingly exists at the intersection of art and social practice. Hailed as “one of the finest songwriters of the day” by The New Yorker, he is known to haunt basement rock clubs and august concert halls alike, where you’ll likely find him in the greenroom, double-fisting coffee and a book.

He has released four albums as a singer-songwriter, including, most recently, the intimate Book of Travelers (Nonesuch Records), which Rolling Stone called “a stunning portrait of a singular moment in America.” As a composer, he has been commissioned by many of America’s leading arts institutions, including the Brooklyn Academy of Music, Carnegie Hall, the Los Angeles Philharmonic, Orpheus Chamber Orchestra, and The Public Theater, which in 2012 presented his musical February House.

In 2019, Kahane was named the inaugural Creative Chair for the Oregon Symphony, following the premiere in Portland of his oratorio emergency shelter intake form, a work that explores inequality in America through the lens of housing issues. The piece was released as an album in March of 2020, and is scheduled for performance by half a dozen other American orchestras in the coming years.

In his 2023–24 season, Kahane embarks on a new collaborative commissioning project In the Garden of the Gift with the Attacca Quartet, Pekka Kuusisto, and Roomful of Teeth as part of a two-year initiative with San Francisco Performances, with additional performances scheduled around the U.S. and Europe. Season highlights include the European premiere of emergency shelter intake form in London with the BBC Concert Orchestra, duo recitals with Jeffrey Kahane, a conducting appearance with the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra, and the New York premiere of his piano concerto Heirloom by Jeffrey Kahane and The Knights. Venues include UCLA’s Nimoy Theater, Seattle’s Meany Center, and New York’s 92NY.

Kahane’s discography also includes 2014’s The Ambassador, which received an acclaimed staging at BAM, directed by Tony and Olivier Award-winner John Tiffany; an album of chamber music, The Fiction Issue, with the string quartet Brooklyn Rider and vocalist/composer Shara Nova; a recording with The Knights of his orchestral song cycle Crane Palimpsest; as well as the original cast album for February House.

A frequent collaborator across a range of musical communities, Gabriel has worked with an array of artists including Paul Simon, Sufjan Stevens, Andrew Bird, Phoebe Bridgers, Caroline Shaw, and Chris Thile. After nearly two decades in Brooklyn, Kahane relocated with his family to Portland, Oregon, in March of 2020. Their freakishly self-possessed cat, Roscoe Greebletron Jones III, when not under investigation for securities fraud, continues his fruitless attempts to monetize his Instagram account.

CAROLINE SHAW
Born August 1, 1982; Greenville, NC

The Isle

WORK COMPOSED: 2016
Commissioned with generous support from the Folger Shakespeare Library.

WORLD PREMIERE: Roomful of Teeth gave the world premiere of the work at the Folger Shakespeare Library on November 20, 2016 in Washington, DC.

INSTRUMENTATION: Eight voices

ESTIMATED DURATION: 15 minutes

Composer, vocalist, violinist, and producer Caroline Shaw became the youngest recipient of the Pulitzer Prize for Music in 2013 with her groundbreaking Partita for 8 Voices. Today, Shaw is a sought-after composer/performer in multiple genres, including classical music, film and television scores, and contemporary popular music.

In September 2023, the University of Iowa presented Shaw and some of her music for string quartet. Tonight’s concert features an example of the vocal ensemble music that first brought Shaw to international attention ten years ago.

Shaw writes, “The Isle begins with a cloud of murmuring voices—a musical imagining of something hinted at in Shakespeare’s stage directions in The Tempest. The calls for ‘a burden, dispersedly’ and ‘solemn music’ suggest an off-stage refrain and/or perhaps something even more otherworldly. In Shakespearean Metaphysics, Michael Witmore writes: ‘Like the island itself, which seems to be the ultimate environment in which the play’s action takes place, music is a medium that flows from, within, and around that imaginary place into the ambient space of performance proper. If some of the courtiers from Naples and Milan are lulled to sleep by the island’s ‘solemn music,’ the audience can hear this music in a way that it cannot feel the hardness of the boards that the sleeping players lie on.’

“In taking cues from this reading of the play,” Shaw continues, “I’ve constructed my own musical reading of the island of The Tempest. Three monologues, by Ariel, Caliban, and Prospero, are set in three distinct ways. Ariel’s initial song of welcome appears, for the most part, homophonically, although its break from the quasi-robotic delivery (into the “burden, dispersedly”) points to the character’s vaporous and ethereal nature. Caliban’s famous description of the island as ‘full of noises’ finds its home in a distraught and lonely monodic song, ornamented and driven by extraneous sounds. Prospero’s evocation of the various features and inhabitants of the island (from the final act) breaks apart into spoken voices that eventually dissolve into the wordless voices of the beginning, mirroring his pledge to throw his book of spells into the sea (and possibly to return to the island’s pre-lingual state). The harmonic material of the beginning and the end of the piece (the murmuring voices) is a 24-chord progression that includes all major and minor triads of the...

Western 12-note system (for fun). As Prospero says: ‘But this rough magic I here abjure, and when I have required some heavenly music, which even now I do, to work mine end upon their senses that this airy charm is for, I’ll break my staff, bury it certain fathoms in the earth, and deeper than did ever plummet sound I’ll drown my book.’ (Solemn music).”

LIBRETTO FOR THE ISLE

ARIEL:
Come unto these yellow sands,
And then take hands:
Curtsied when you have, and kissed
The wild waves whist,
Foot it featly here, and there, and sweet sprites bear
the burden.
[Burden dispersedly, within]
Hark, hark, bow wow: the watchdogs bark, bow wow.
[Burden dispersedly, within]
Hark, hark, I hear, the strain of strutting Chanticleer
Cry cock-a-diddle-dow.
Full fathom five thy father lies,

Of his bones are coral made:
Those are pearls that were his eyes,
Nothing of him that doth fade,
But doth suffer a sea change
Into something rich and strange:
Sea nymphs hourly ring his knell.
[Burden: ding dong.]
Hark now I hear them, ding dong bell.

CALIBAN:
Be not afeard. The isle is full of noises,
Sounds and sweet airs that give delight and hurt not.
Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments
Will hum about mine ears, and sometimes voices
That, if I then had waked after long sleep,
Will make me sleep again; and then, in dreaming,
The clouds methought would open, and show riches
Ready to drop upon me, that when I waked
I cried to dream again.

PROSPERO:
You elves of hills, brooks, standing lakes, and groves,
And you that on the sands with printless foot
Do chase the ebbing Neptune, and do fly him
When he comes back; you demi-puppets that
By moonshine do the green sour ringlets make,
Whereof the ewe not bites; and you whose pastime
Is to make midnight mushrumps, that rejoice
To hear the solemn curfew; by whose aid,
Weak masters though you be, I have bedimmed
The noontide sun, called forth the mutinous winds,
And ’twixt the green sea and the azured vault
Set roaring war; to the dread rattling thunder
Have I given fire, and rifted Jove’s stout oak
With his own bolt; the strong-based promontory
Have I made shake, and by the spurs plucked up
The pine and cedar; graves at my command
Have waked their sleepers, oped, and let ’em forth
By my so potent art. But this rough magic
I here abjure, and when I have required
Some heavenly music, which even now I do,
To work mine end upon their senses that
This airy charm is for, I’ll break my staff,
Bury it certain fathoms in the earth,
And deeper than did ever plummet sound
I’ll drown my book.

Caroline Shaw’s The Isle was commissioned by and premiered at the Folger Shakespeare Library on November 20, 2016.
Leilehua Lanzilotti is a Kanaka Maoli (Native Hawaiian) composer / sound artist dedicated to the arts of our time. A “leading composer-performer” (The New York Times), Lanzilotti’s work is characterized by expansive explorations of timbre. Lanzilotti’s practice explores radical indigenous contemporaneity, integrating community engagement into the heart of projects.

In 2022, Lanzilotti was honored to be a finalist for the 2022 Pulitzer Prize in Music for with eyes the color of time, which the Pulitzer committee called, “a vibrant composition … that distinctly combines experimental string textures and episodes of melting lyricism.”

On Stochastic Wave Behavior evolved as a collaboration between geoscientist Rónadh Cox and her team of researchers at the National Science Foundation, and Lanzilotti. Scientists and musicians worked together at MASS MoCA’s [Massachusetts Museum of Contemporary Art] summer workshop in 2022.

“Wayfinding, observing nature, and respecting the ocean have been present since my childhood growing up in Hawai’i,” writes Lanzilotti. “So when Rónadh and Brad asked me to be part of the National Science Foundation-funded ‘A few waves do most of the work’ project, I felt very connected to their ideas of integrating knowledge and research about the ocean into classrooms.

“Reclaiming language and supporting indigenous language revitalization have been essential to my artistic work in the past year. Connecting to language, meeting with my family every weekend to support safe learning environments, all of these actions were content-based towards a new way of approaching my compositional practice. A language that is changing, that is evolving, that is new, is alive. Similarly, compositional practices that engage new sounds through an indigenous lens embrace native language and ways of knowing as an active part of the creative process.

“Indigenous communities often struggle to remain ‘authentic,’ pushing up against archaic stereotypes and a genuine desire to preserve culture.”
In Paradoxes of Hawaiian Sovereignty, J. Kehaulani Kauanui writes:

"In the U.S. context, as Kevin Bruyneel argues, one of the defining elements of American colonial rule is the fastening of Indigenous Peoples to the concept of ‘colonial time’ by locating them ‘out of time,’ where they are not allowed modernity. This ‘shackling indigenous identity to an archaic form’ upholds the concept of authentic Indigenous Peoples always being already primitive/static (positioned to continuously struggle for recognition of their humanity), while the colonizer is always characterized as civilized/advanced, thereby rationalizing domination of Indigenous Peoples as a form of ‘progress.’ It is this enduring notion of the ‘savage’ that continues to be used by states in their attempt to justify political subordination, such as the ‘domestic dependent nation’ status subject to U.S. plenary power in the case of federally recognized tribal nations."

“There is much more to be done in support of indigenous language revitalization,” Lanzilotti concludes, “but I believe Prof. Cox’s research extends to include metaphors for that movement: a few waves can make a difference—have made our work as Kanaka Maoli artists relevant to today’s dynamic landscape where science and indigenous knowledge celebrate the power of nature. Through radical indigenous contemporaneity, this work hopes to make those connections both in the classroom and in the community.

The following comments are excerpted from Rónadh Cox’s original proposal to bring coastal geoscience to the public:

“Music can convey stochastic wave behavior, revealing the unpredictability of large waves in the coastal zone. [This new work] will use Roomful of Teeth’s extraordinary vocal talents to investigate the behavior of waves approaching the coast, focusing on the unpredictability of very large wave events, and including choral components representing boulder movement in response to different wave types ... using music to convey the science of wave interactions and wave amplification opens new doors and prospects for engaging the public via performance. The collaborators have international reputations, providing not only an opportunity for top-notch musical interpretations of data, but also extensive exposure in concert halls and via [other music sharing platforms].

“Geoscience will be explicitly linked and bundled with the music, for wide distribution... Roomful of Teeth regularly do campus residencies in which they seek ways to interact with students and professors, finding bridges between performative music and pedagogy. Until now, it has been difficult for them to find crossovers into the physical sciences ... accompanying visuals and text will explicitly link the structure of the music to waves and storm seas; and will link storm seas to the work done on beaches and at the coast. They will include societally important information about coastal erosion and sea-level change, as well as the hazards of rogue and sneaker waves. Such initiatives are needed, as coastal science is not making its way effectively into the public sphere ... this different and unusual framework may help the data and the awareness to jump the divide and make their way into a more public consciousness. We hope.”

Gabriel Kahane
Born July 10, 1981, Venice, CA

Elevator Songs

Work Composed: 2022–23
Commissioned by Roomful of Teeth Vocal Arts Project, Inc., Hancher Auditorium at the University of Iowa, Meany Center for the Performing Arts, and San Francisco Performances.

World Premiere: Roomful of Teeth and Gabriel Kahane gave the world premiere at the Meany Center at the University of Washington on November 2, 2023 in Seattle, Washington.

Instrumentation: Nine voices, Piano, Vibraphone, Electric Guitar, Violin

Estimated Duration: 35 minutes

Gabriel Kahane combines incisive lyrics, versatile musical language, and an unflinching willingness to explore uncomfortable societal realities. A musician and storyteller whose work increasingly exists at the intersection of art and social practice, Kahane has been hailed as “one of the finest songwriters of the day” by The New Yorker.

Kahane has released four albums as a singer-songwriter, including 2016’s Book of Travelers (Nonesuch Records), which Rolling Stone called “a stunning portrait of a singular moment in America.” As a composer, he has been commissioned by many of America’s leading arts institutions and orchestras, including the Brooklyn Academy of Music, Carnegie Hall, and the Los Angeles Philharmonic, among others.

In 2019, Kahane was named the inaugural Creative Chair for the Oregon Symphony, following the premiere in Portland of his oratorio emergency shelter intake form, a work that explores inequality in America through the lens of housing issues.

Kahane writes, “Elevator Songs is a celebration of the individual voices that comprise Roomful of Teeth. While the ensemble is widely known for its incredible stylistic flexibility and use of extended vocal techniques, I learned over the course of several workshop sessions with the group at MASS MoCA [Massachusetts Museum of Contemporary Art] in 2022 that they are all, unsurprisingly, wonderful singers of tunes. Given my background as a singer-songwriter, it felt natural to use this project as an opportunity to create, in essence, a ‘Roomful of Teeth Songbook,’ an anthology to showcase each voice within the context of a larger work. What you will hear tonight grew out of the first movement, written as a sketch during that aforementioned visit
